CAPSTONE 02 · RESEARCH INTELLIGENCE BRIEF

Research a real decision, and check what you are told.

Take a decision you or your business actually faces. Run it through Research, check the sources that matter yourself, and end with a recommendation you would defend.

WHAT YOU BUILD

MODULE 4.2

A cited investigation

Research plans the searches, reads the sources and returns a cited report.

MINIMUM

- Run in Research, not plain chat
- Eight or more distinct sources

DISCERNMENT

Claims checked at source

You open the sources behind every claim the decision rests on.

MINIMUM

- Every critical claim checked
- Rejections logged with reasons

THE DECISION

A clear recommendation

One recommendation, weighed against the real alternatives.

MINIMUM

- Recommendation stated first
- 2–3 options, same criteria

WHAT CHECKING A CLAIM MEANS

Does the source say it?

Open the link and find the sentence. Same number, unit, date and scope.

Is the source fit?

Who published it, when, and whether they have a stake.

Would it change the decision?

Check fully any claim that could flip it.

A citation is a pointer, not proof. You are accountable for every claim in the brief.

WHAT YOU SUBMIT

The brief — 2-4 PAGES

- Recommendation first, in one paragraph
- Options weighed against your criteria
- Evidence with citations you have opened
- Risks, and what would change your mind

The verification note — ONE PAGE

- Which sources you opened, and how many
- What you confirmed, corrected or rejected
- What you changed in the brief as a result

HOW IT IS ASSESSED

GROUND RULES

— A real decision that is still open. Hypotheticals do not count.

— Never cite a source you have not opened yourself.

— Remove confidential figures and names before you submit.
